

Delirium

Around a third of patients aged over 65 admitted to hospital may suffer an acute confusional state called 'delirium'. There are many causes of delirium, such as infection, constipation, pain and medications. Delirium can take time to resolve once the underlying trigger has been treated. It frequently settles faster when the patient is in a familiar environment, such as their own home. It can take weeks or even months to fully resolve, but sometimes may represent a new chronic level of confusion, and sometimes may unmask a new diagnosis of dementia. Delirium can be distressing to witness and experience, but the ward team are trained to recognise and treat it if it develops.

ReSPECT

Sometimes patients become more unwell, and the intensity of treatment may need to be escalated. However, some treatments, such as being treated on the intensive care unit (ICU), can be physically and psychologically challenging, and may not be the right course of action. During an admission, patients and families will be given the opportunity to discuss the patient's individualised Recommended Summary Plan for Emergency Care and Treatment (ReSPECT). More information on what this is can be found here: <https://www.resus.org.uk/respect>

Please note we have zero tolerance to abuse towards our staff. If you have concerns, please contact the ward manager or the Patient Advice and Liaison Service (PALS) on 0118 322 8338 or email PALS@royalberkshire.nhs.uk
