

Diabetic retinopathy and vaginal delivery

This statement is from the Royal Berkshire NHS Foundation Trust's Department of Ophthalmology (Eye Department) and relates to diabetic retinopathy and vaginal birth.

Why have I been given this leaflet?

You are receiving this information as you have proliferative (advanced) diabetic retinopathy and are currently pregnant. You do not need to avoid vaginal birth if you have had a laser treatment. If you have recently been diagnosed with diabetic retinopathy, you should discuss plans for your birth with the consultant ophthalmologist (eye specialist) in charge of your care and your maternity team.

Further information is available on the NHS website <https://www.nhs.uk/conditions/diabetic-retinopathy/>

To find out more about our Trust visit www.royalberkshire.nhs.uk

Please ask if you need this information in another language or format.

Miss Sarah-Lucie Watson, Consultant Ophthalmologist

Reviewed: March 2025

Next review due: March 2027