

Delirium

Some older patients in hospital may suffer an acute confusional state called 'delirium'. It may have many causes, such as infection, constipation, pain and medications. Delirium can take time to resolve once the underlying trigger has been treated. It frequently settles faster when the patient is in a familiar environment, such as their own home. It can take weeks or even months to fully resolve, but sometimes may represent a new chronic level of confusion, and sometimes may unmask a new diagnosis of dementia. Delirium can be distressing to witness and experience, but the ward team are trained to recognise and treat it if it develops.

ReSPECT

If patients become more unwell, the intensity of treatment may need to be escalated. However, some treatments (e.g. on ICU), can be physically and mentally challenging, and may not be the right course of action. During an admission, patients and families will be given the opportunity to discuss the patient's individualised Recommended Summary Plan for Emergency Care and Treatment (ReSPECT). Visit www.resus.org.uk/respect for more information.
